Environmental Policy

Farncombe Smith 1990 LTD operates within a sector which involves the use of resources and materials in order to carry out its works. Due to the nature of the work, Farncombe Smith 1990 LTD recognises that its activities have a direct impact on the environment and is committed to improving its environmental performance.

The responsibility for environmental factors rests upon all sectors of management. Farncombe Smith 1990 LTD will ensure that the policy is pursued throughout the organisation from management through to operatives.

In order to achieve this, attention will be given to:

- Awareness on environmental factors for those working for and on behalf of the company. Specific training and information will be administered in order to encourage good environmental practises.
- The use and re-use of materials in order to minimise and reduce the creation of waste.
- Where possible, the use of sustainable or recycled materials or products from sustainable sources.
- The control of emissions, noise and dust through use of suppression and management systems.
- The use of potentially hazardous or harmful products during construction processes and the safe disposal of them
- The disposal of waste, hazardous and potentially toxic materials to avoid environmental harm.
- The conservation of energy through management and selection of resources, equipment, plant and transport.
- The development, monitoring and investigation into future systems, practices and procedures in order to ensure that the environment remains a principal consideration.
